Summer Family Challenge
Finding God In The Everyday
Life of Summer

Week 8: As you are driving today point out the lines on the road. They are guides. They help us know where we should and should not be. They set limits for us. What limits does God put on us? On our behavior? Why? (Deuteronomy 5:6-21)

Week 9: We are now at the end of our journey in Finding God in the everyday Life of summer. I feel it is time for us to now reflect on the past weeks and what we all have experienced. I would like to invite you to pause in the midst of the craziness, and take a deep breath (God is there in the air, too!) and truly pay attention to finding God in the everyday. God is there in both the beauty and the messiness of life. He is there in the sunrise, and the crying child, and the toddler holding up his arms to be picked up, and a friend's smile, and the neighbor who needs a favor, and the animals who share our lives, and the teenager trying so hard to figure out where she belongs in the world, and the older person so eager to share his stories with anyone who will listen, and the list goes on and on. Then say a quick prayer of thanksgiving that God is right there with you.
